

Question for written answer E-015414/2015
to the Commission
Rule 130
Jens Rohde (ALDE)

Subject: Corruption in the EU

Corruption is still a problem in the EU. Unfortunately, not all countries are equally aware of the problem. According to the study referenced below, Denmark is one of the countries with the least corruption, whereas countries such as Spain face a greater challenge. It can impair the working of the internal market if businesses and consumers cannot feel confident in the administrations, courts etc. of all EU Member States.

What has the Commission done to address corruption in the EU? What initiatives has the Commission taken to keep the fight against corruption high on the agenda?¹
