Subject: Conclusions of the Paris agreement on climate protection

As the President of the European Parliament, Martin Schultz, said at the opening of the December part-session in Strasbourg, the Paris agreement on climate protection is a turning point for the future of our planet. He hailed it as 'global, groundbreaking and trendsetting', but stressed that efforts must now be focused on putting it into practice. What steps is the Commission preparing to take in order to ensure the Paris agreement on climate protection is put into practice as soon as possible and without exception?
