Subject: Mobile telephone charges

On 27 October 2015 Parliament gave final approval to rules outlawing mobile telephone roaming charges within the EU that will come into full force from June 2017. This is a major step forward in removing artificial barriers. These barriers will not, however, be totally eliminated because not only will this 'free' roaming be limited in time, but also calls between two phones in different countries when neither is roaming will continue to incur higher fees than domestic calls. Is a review of these two issues on the Commission's agenda?
