Subject: VP/HR - EU common foreign policy regarding Russia

The Ministers of Justice of the Baltic States have again put forward a claim against the Russian Federation for compensation for the damage caused during the occupation of their countries by the Soviet Union.

What is the Commission's position on this claim? In making such claims, to what extent should account be taken of the common foreign policy of the EU regarding Russia? In the Commission's view, what opportunities or risks are associated with such claims?
