

Question for written answer E-015186/2015/rev.1
to the Commission
Rule 130
István Ujhelyi (S&D)

Subject: Are all migrants basically terrorists?!

“Of course it’s not accepted, but the fact is that all terrorists are basically migrants,” said Viktor Orbán in his interview with the Brussels-based Politico news website. “The question is when they migrated to the European Union.”

Does the Commission agree with this statement? If not, to what extent does it consider similar statements a threat to European security?

How can the migration influx and the terrorism threatening Europe be clearly and unequivocally distinguished?

Is the Commission willing and able to take decisive action against inflammatory, populist statements?
