

Question for written answer E-014973/2015
to the Commission
Rule 130
Daniel Dalton (ECR)

Subject: Barriers to trade in the European collaborative economy

In light of recent actions by certain authorities to ban some platforms in the collaborative economy that are widely used by European consumers, does the Commission agree that, whilst respecting Member State subsidiarity, bans in some territories on popular online platforms not only undermine consumer choice but also act as barriers to trade within the internal market and damage the creation of a digital single market?