

Question for written answer E-015949/2015
to the Commission
Rule 130
Esteban González Pons (PPE)

Subject: Conclusions of the ex-post evaluation of the European Globalisation Adjustment Fund (EGF)

The conclusions sent by the Commission regarding the EGF, in accordance with Article 17(b) of Regulation 1927/2006, show positive data in terms of reemployment for those affected, with the rate being almost 50 %. The data on types of contract can also be viewed as positive: out of that 50 %, permanent contracts accounted for 81 % and 89 % were in full-time work.

However, the survey undertaken as part of the final phase of this evaluation shows that 41 % of the beneficiaries of this aid were not satisfied with the quality of their new employment and rated it as worse or even much worse than their previous job, with the main complaint relating to the compatibility of their skills and the professional training and support provided.

Is the Commission working on solutions to address these specific problems?

In view of the positive data on reemployment, are measures being developed that could increase this percentage?