Subject: Social mobility subsidy for Madeira residents travelling to Porto Santo

The social mobility subsidy for Madeira residents travelling to Porto Santo between the months of October and June aims to improve the competitiveness of a Portuguese outermost region that is characterised by seasonal demand, particularly summer tourism.

Given that revitalising local economies and boosting employment are among the Commission's flagship policies, why has the Commission not yet delivered the opinion requested by the regional government of Madeira on this matter?

It is small and medium-sized enterprises whose projects will be affected by the failure to meet the deadlines for responding to the request, along with projects that have the potential to create jobs in this remote outermost region.

Can the Commission deliver the opinion requested as a matter of urgency?
