

Question for written answer E-015204/2015
to the Commission

Rule 130

Tomáš Zdechovský (PPE), József Nagy (PPE) and Patricija Šulin (PPE)

Subject: Exchange of information on criminals

In the light of the recent terrorist attacks in Paris and current danger in other Member States, the exchange of information on people with criminal records seems to be of greater importance than ever before. Given that criminal law differs in the various Member States and that existing cooperation is not effective, there is a need for improvement. Does the Commission plan to improve cooperation among Member States on this issue? How and when would new measures be introduced?